RESEARCH INTERESTS

I am generally interested in citizens' political engagement in advanced democracies including the causes and consequences of electoral turnout, political protest, digital media and political attitudes. I am also interested in attitudes towards corruption and in survey and experimental methodology. Recently my research has focused on the attitudinal consequences of the economic crisis, with a special focus on populist attitudes. In my next project I intend to explore the relationship between populist attitudes, cognitive mobilization and value change.
